Lonely Planet – Valparaiso: “Syncopated, dilapidated, colorful and poetic, Valparaiso is a wonderful mess. Pablo Neruda, who drew much inspiration from this hard-working port town, said it best: ‘Valparaiso, how absurd you are...you haven’t combed your hair, you’ve never had time to get dressed, life has always surprised you.’”

Servitour

Compas382456 from United States wrote: “We had a really fun and informative tour to Valparaiso with servitour organised by the singular hotel .We opted not go to a winery as we were going to BOCANARIZ that evening . We had a leisurely walk up and down the hills of Valparaiso . Marco our guide was very good at communicating with us about what we wanted . We didn’t want to stop for a long lunch so we picked up a quick empanada at a very popular shop that he picked for us . I had plenty of time for photography and we felt as though Marco tailored the trip to our requirements . His english was fantastic .My only tip would be to take a jumper or jacket because Valparaiso is always cooler than Santiago . Could not recommend more highly !!!”
